"The Girl in the Limousine" and "Too Many Husbands" to Appear That Night.

Lionel Barrymore in a new play by Booth Tarkington, the production of which John D. Williams intends to stage, is a new play, "The Girl in the Limousine," which Mr. Williams has just secured from Mr. Tarkington, who collaborated in "Up from Nowhere," now under the Williams banner at the Comedy Theatre, and as a result of this exchange of notes the next Tarkington play, already incubated beyond the first draft, has entered Mr. Williams's sphere of influence.

The title of the work is "Kunel Blake," and it will be in reserve by Mr. Williams for the future, ready to fit Lionel Barrymore.

"The Girl in the Limousine," by Wilson Collier and Avery Hopwood, and "Too Many Husbands," by Somerset Maugham, will be allowed by A. H. Woods to take the public into their confidence on the same night, October 6. The first will start at the Wood Theatre, at the Eltinge Theatre, and the second will bring the flavor of wit and potatoes to the Booth.

Warfield to Make Tour. David Warfield is still seeking more worlds to conquer with "The Auctioneer." He opened his twentieth season in David Belasco's production at Parson's Theatre, and he is now on tour, attended by the same company which supported his latest last season. Mr. Warfield's tour this winter will start with most of the principal cities of the East and end at the summit of the country to San Francisco.

Mrs. James K. Hackett and Katherine Harris have been engaged by Charles Frohman, Inc., for the principal part in the new play, "The Auctioneer," which Mr. Barrymore will put in circulation at the Empire Theatre.

Ruth Chertoff's company in "Moonlight and Honey," which will be in circulation at the Empire Theatre on Monday, September 29, has James Rennie, Lawrence Edginger, Lucille Watson and other stars.

At the close of their present engagement in the "Nine O'Clock Revue" Savoy Theatre, the company is directing a six weeks' vacation at the Hippodrome. Afterward they will be seen prowling around America at the rehearsals for the new musical play which two new players are being drawn from a French force.

Ernest Glendinning, who gets the principal part in the "A Regular Fellow," at the Cort Theatre, is directing at rehearsals the new production for Martin Brown's new force, "An Innocent Idea." This production, Charles Emerson's second effort, is the season's new play to be given at the Cort Theatre on October 6.

Helen Bolton in "See Saw." Helen Bolton, formerly exclaiming sweetly with John Cort in "Mother Carey's Chickens," and with Comstock and Gert in "Oh, Lady Luck," has been presented into service by Henry W. Savage for the vampire role in "See Saw," the new musical comedy designed to titillate and amuse the audience.

Miss Bolton replaces Mabel Bunney, who tripped over part of Boston and injured her leg. Harold Atters, who occupied her part in "The Girl in the Limousine," has been commissioned to write three scenes for the "Shubert Galettes of 1919," at the Forty-fourth Theatre, which Mrs. Bayes can have in her own hands.

Miss Bayes is confining her voice to her specialties. The film has entirely withdrawn from the limelight, and her attention is in place of "Those Who Walk in Darkness." She will soon be susceptible to rehearsals of a new play for the Shubert Theatre.

Laurillard and Grosvenor, English producers, have made an offer to the Shuberts to acclimate in London the "Shubert Theatre," which the Shuberts are to acquire. The title will be changed to "Oh, I Say, What a Flapper." Claude Grosvenor offers odds that some of the principals, including Harry Kelly, Miss O'Brien and London in the spring, about the time that prohibition has made the props for the new drinking scene practically unobtainable.

Frederick Lewis, associated with Sothern and Marlowe since they first put their heads together over Shakespeare, has been retained by them to pool his voice with theirs during the coming season. "Horatio in 'Hamlet,' O'Brien in 'Twelfth Night' and Lucio in 'The Taming of the Shrew'" will take up a lot of his time.

Sarg Shows New Bill. Tony Sarg's Marionettes created their usual sensation with the opening of a series of four bills last night at the Provincetown Players Theatre, tucked away in the southeast bushes of Washington Square. "Victorian Romance," "The Indian Snake," "Charmers," "A Strange Dream," "Greta and Her Dog," "The Royal Juggler" and two acts from "Tolly and Her Pals" gave the woodenheads a chance to demonstrate that some living actors could learn points from them.

Mark A. Luescher, editor of the Hippodrome literary supplement, respectfully submits that Charles Dillingham has extended the four weeks engagement at the big house of Clyde Cook, the English pantomime and dancer, for some time, thus insuring happy days for the children and elephants over the holidays.

Willie Solar has been eclipsed in "A Lonely Romeo" at the Casino Theatre by Mrs. Clara, who adopted the role of Anonias Beebe not only with his legs but with his voice, and who sings "The Influenza Blues" with perfect impunity from criticism and scorn.

A tour of the country will be made by Henrietta Croaman in a new comedy by Stanley Dark and Eva Denison entitled "The Critical Period," which will be through that district on October 29 at Atlantic City.
